Soup & Sandwiches
The Healthy Lunch Duo

Soup and a sandwich has been a lunch-time favorite for years. What's more filling and simple to prepare? Here are ways to make your soup and sandwich meal a healthy option.

Bread:
- Choose bread high in fiber to help lower cholesterol.
- Look for the words "whole" or "bran" first on ingredient list.
- Whole grain breads such as whole wheat and rye are great sources of soluble fiber.
- Consume breads with less than 2 g of fat per serving.
- Stay away from croissants, biscuits and other buttery breads.

Sandwich Fillings:
- Fill your sandwiches with low-fat, healthy foods. Fresh vegetables are a great choice!
- Choose low fat varieties of luncheon meats, such as turkey breast, chicken breast, or lean ham.
- Choose low-fat or reduced fat cheeses.
- Fish such as salmon, sardines and mackerel are full of healthy fats.
- Choose spreads that are low in calories and fats like mustard or fat-free mayonnaise or fat-free salad dressing.
- Beans and legumes in the form of hummus or a homemade bean spread make a great vegetarian sandwich.

Soup:
- Canned soups typically are high in salt and should be limited.
- Homemade soups can be heart-healthy and very high in nutrition.
- Add flavor by using plenty of onions and garlic.
- Increase fiber by adding whole grain rice or pasta, legumes, and beans.
• Instead of crackers in soup, use hearty whole grain day old bread toasted and broken into crumbs.

• Almost any cooked vegetable can be blended and used to thicken a soup or sauce. Tomato paste is a great thickener. Eggplant, zucchini or other squash, broccoli, cauliflower, carrots, potato, or celery roots are all excellent choices.

• Use evaporated skim milk instead of cream when making cream soups. When dining out, choose broth-based soups.

• To help control sodium intake, use low sodium bouillon and water, and use low sodium seasonings or fresh herbs.
